HONOLULU—Aloha, brud-da! All da wahines at Waikiki wearing da 'new mini-shift. Too much good looking! It's sleeveless, shorter than most mini-skirts. Worn over bathing suits or shorts—meaning practically all day. Rainbow prints are most popular—a lot that looks like night club costume color under fluorescent light. In the top shops, $5 to $7. But you can probably get them at $1 and $2 in bargain Ala Moana shopping center.

... what clothes we will need for Hawaii? Will my husband need a dinner jacket?"

This is the greatest sports clothes country in the world. Don't buy at home for here. Bring an empty suitcase. The selection in Honolulu is endless. Both price and quality.

Women spend the day in bathing suits or muumuus, the print Mother Hubbard. Comfortable and it can be worn day and evening. (Old island joke about a girl in a muumu: "It's like your bank account. You know it's in there, but you don't know how much.")

There are shorty muus. Suzie Wong muus—with slit sides. Pakaimuus, with a high Chinese collar. Mother Hubbard muumuus will go $25 to $35 in best shops. And you see them in bargain spots for $1.99 to $9.95.

The bargain shopping is at Ala Moana shopping center, two decks of walkaround malls. The elegant Waikiki shops are Andrade, Carol and Mary, Liberty House, McInerney. All have several shops in hotels and Waikiki shopping district.

Men's shops are just as good. I favor Ross Sutherland and Andrade's. Your husband does not need a dinner jacket. I don't expect to wear a tie more than once a month in the islands—for a big hotel dinner. Aloha shirts do for most places, day and night.

"Should we make the tour of the Outer Islands?"

These are the islands for quiet living. But there's no swinging night life as in Waikiki. Waikiki has the restaurants. The smart outdoor bars. The posh hotels by the side.

Against it, the hotels are too much side by side. (Where all da sun go to, brudda?) It's a $5 taxi ride from the airport, but I can still hear those jets boom off. There's high rise construction everywhere—the pile drivers and jack hammers begin at 7:30 in the morning. Bang! Bang! (Next year maybe mo' bettah.)

"Any suggestions for restaurants . . . ?"

Canlis seems most popular. (Tie and coat upstairs. Aloha shirts down by the piano bar which is more fun anyway.) Michel's is supposed to be tops. (I've never been able to get a reservation.) The outdoor, on-the-beach, torchlight atmosphere of the Tahitian Lanai is pleasant.

Very good food and splendid view 25 floors up at the Top of the Ilikai (Take the outside glass elevator. Not as scary as it looks.) This time I went for La Ronde for lunch. A spinner on top of 23 floors. The glassed-in restaurant makes a complete revolution every 60 minutes. (I could feel the movement in occasional little jerks.) Lunch was good and very good service.

I fell into a place called Yamato's with the best Japanese dinner I've ever had. (I'd only recommend it if you are for Japanese food too much—the decor shows no imagination.) But the food! The sashimi comes in a carved piece of ice. Many things served in big shells with fired wicks to keep them warm. The 'c'uxe dinner in a private-sit-on-the-floor room is $7.

"What is the flying time and the time by ship to Hawaii?"

Fly it from Los Angeles or San Francisco in about four and a half hours. (I took Pan-Am's round-the-world Flight 1 at 9 a.m. and was on the beach before lunch. There's a three-hour time change.

By ship it's four days and five nights. Leaving in the afternoon and arriving Honolulu in the early morning.

Assignment TV

By TERRENCE O'FLAHERTY

After two weeks of face-to-face confrontations with some of the more superficial elves who occupy the television schedules of CBS and ABC and after trying to make them sound interesting in print when most of them are not even interesting in person; after all this fakery, it was a delight to find three actors who talked like human beings, who spoke of their craft with affection, and who never once mentioned how much they were paid for their services.

They were Michael MacLiammoir, a delightful old charmer of 70 whose one-man show "The Importance of Being Oscar" will be shown on CBS later this year, and a pair of younger performers, Charles Aidman and Joyce Van Patten, who will recreate their Broadway roles in the Edgar Lee Masters classic "Spoon River Anthology" for CBS.

I wanted to enfold them in my arms and run up their names in flags, but these people need no such affection or publicity. They are the sort of actors who are fed by their own satisfaction at doing something worth doing. Their audiences are not the large ones that follow flying nuns or men dressed up in kids' costumes. Theirs is the select following who demand artistry and honor it.

IT IS comforting that CBS will find two small hours in which to drop their mature performances among the hundreds of hours of pratfalls and laugh machines. The dates are not yet set.

For 30 years and more MacLiammoir has been the heart of the Irish theater world as an actor and writer. He made his first appearance on the stage in London in 1911 in a children's play called "The Goldfish." One of the other child actors in the show was Noel Coward.

"He spoke exactly the same then as he does now—precise and terribly crisp, and I remember the first thing he said to me: "What do you really want to do with your life? At that age I hadn't given it a thought, but he knew right from the start. His career has been a long, straight road, brilliantly lighted. But one thing keeps him from greatness: he lacks a sense of poetry . . ."

That's as precise a description of Noel Coward as one is likely to hear.

MacLIAMMOIR'S knowledge of Oscar Wilde is voluminous and his one-man attempt to capture the elusive Irishman in "The Importance of Being Oscar" has been applauded in Europe and on Broadway much in the manner of Hal Holbrook's "Mark Twain Tonight," which was last season's American television hit. The production which CBS will present this fall is one done for the Irish television network.

The adaptation of "Spoon River" is being taped in New York this month and is based on the successful Broadway production of 1963 in which Aidman, Miss Van Patten appeared. For television audiences, CBS has added Jason Robards to the cast. Both of the young performers were attractive, healthy and enthusiastic.

"WE'VE BEEN bursting with eagerness to do this on television," said Miss Van Patten. "It offers an actor so much that is human and honest. It's really a collection of epitaphs from the mythical town of Spoon River, and each of us has the opportunity to play 15 roles."

Both "Spoon River" and "The Importance of Being Oscar" have already been recorded for Columbia Masterworks. These television productions are an indication that CBS intends to continue its leadership in the area of distinguished dramatic specials which began last season with such successes as "Death of a Salesman," "The Final War of Olly Winter," and "Class Menagerie."
